Quite a number of ladies enjoyed the afternoon card party given at the Country club today, at which Mrs. John M. Choat, and Mrs. Charles W. Gutter presided as hostesses. The putting contest which will take place this evening has aroused much interest and many entries are expected. The host and hostesses for the evening will be Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Knight, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McMahon and Mr. Graham M. Blanton.

Mr. Harry Frederickson and Mr. Leland Anderson were the hosts of an informal dinner given at the Country club last evening in honor of Miss Ellen Clayton, who left today for her future home in Houston. Games and contests followed dinner, which was made merry by the guessing of conundrums which served as place cards.

In the contests Ellen Clayton, Bland Solberg, George Knox and Dal Hogan were successful and were presented with favors. Those present were Misses Gertrude Gardner, Bland Solberg, Adelaide Rose, Mary Mee, Messrs. George Knox, Frank Wilson, Dal Hogan and the hosts.

Mrs. John H. Wright who has been in Goda Springs, Kan., for some time for the benefit of her health, is much improved and will return to Oklahoma City September 27.

Miss Gladys Drennan spent Friday at the Kappa Alpha Theta house in Norman.

The Arts and Crafts club will hold its first regular meeting of the season Friday, with Mrs. A. J. Bradley, 825 West Seventeenth street. The meeting will be at 10:30 in the morning to avoid interference with the flower parade and other festivities of the day.

One of the events of the week was the dinner and miscellaneous shower given by Miss Helen Fritts in honor of Miss Leah Fern West, who is the recipient of many pre-nuptial affairs. The dinner table was lavishly decorated with roses and carnations, a large bouquet of bride's nosegay designating the chair of the bride-to-be. The guest list included the Misses George Hastings, Grace Seales, Nina Penn, Katherine Campbell, Edith Canada, Dorothy Wilson, Evelyn Taylor, Sadie Lewis, Mary Parker, Myrtle Lee Spruce, of Bollester, Mo., the guest of Miss Parker, Misses Leonard Hancock West, Jack Starnan and the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dreiman have returned from their trip to Galveston and New Orleans.

Miss Katherine Moore, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Bruce McClelland Jr., and Mr. McClelland, returned today to her home in Paris, Texas.

A number of the younger girls and matrons met at the home of Mrs. R. Bruce Hardman on Thursday to organize themselves into an auction bridge club. There were only eight present but they expect to have a membership of twelve when their plans are completed, nor has a name as yet been selected. Those present as club members were Misses Helen Pugh, Stacia Oakes, Helen Harris, Katherine Sharp.

of Shawnee, whose subject was "Organization for Co-operation," and a talk by Miss Marie Davies, state secretary of the board of missions.

Miss Mabel Tyler left last night for a few days' visit in Fort Worth.

The Federate Missionary society of Oklahoma City met Friday afternoon in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church with Mrs. Paul B. Smith as leader, who opened the devotional services at 2:30. Mrs. Phillips of the St. Luke's Mission study class substituted for Mrs. F. G. King in the round table discussion on missions. The features of the afternoon were talks by Mrs. Frank J. Mulkey and Mrs. E. R. Surface on the question of immigration at Ellis Island. Mrs. Mulkey and Mrs. Surface are well prepared to discuss this subject as they both visited Ellis Island this summer and investigated the matter thoroughly. Miss Gould of the Provident association appeared before the meeting to present to the ladies the question of maintaining a visiting district housekeeper, which plan has recently been inaugurated by the Provident association. A thanks offering service was conducted by Mrs. R. E. Schaefer and at the close of the afternoon a light luncheon was served by the ladies of the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Cyril E. Clemer, Mrs. Raymond Dawson and Miss Bess Westcott will leave tomorrow for Norman where they will be guests at the Kappa Alpha Theta house for "rush week."

At the first sign of skin trouble apply Resinol

That patch of eruption is not necessarily a serious matter! Even in severe, well-established cases of eczema, ringworm or similar affections, Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap usually relieve the itching at once and quickly overcome the trouble completely. How much more, then, can this simple, inexpensive treatment be relied on to dispel skin troubles in their earlier stages.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. For samples of each, free, write to Dept. L-8, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

FAVORITE RECIPES.

Raisin Puffs.
TWO eggs, one-half cup of butter, two cups of flour, one cup of milk, two teaspoons of baking powder, one cup of raisins chopped fine, two tablespoons of sugar. Mix well together, put in cups half full and steam one and one-half hours. Serve with sweet sauce. This will make eight cups.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

"AND then I spoiled my life," said Lillian Underwood.

Her tone was the essence of bitterness. "I could hardly believe that she was the same woman who but a moment before had told me of the happy, struggling days in Paris and New York, when she and Dicky and other comrades had 'worked and played and starved together.'"

"Please," I leaned toward her entreatingly. "Don't tell me any more. I ever there was a sting in my thoughts concerning your past friendship with Dicky you have removed it by your words this morning. I am more than contented to let the matter rest forever."

"I know, my dear, I know. But there are two reasons why I want you to hear me out. You will be fortified to meet any gossip you may hear if you know everything concerning that old time, and then—"

She stopped and gazed at me searchingly. "I have kept all this locked in my heart for years," she said slowly. "No one has ever dared to speak to me of any part of it. It was a terrible effort for me to dig it all up for you. But now that it is begun I feel as if a weight had been lifted from my heart. There is a certain relief in telling you everything. Do you know what I mean?"

"Did I? My thoughts flew back to the day in the sitting room of my mother's friend, Mrs. Stewart, when my dear Dicky had broken down, and I had sobbed out some of my troubles in her comforting arms."

"Of course I know," I answered her gently. "And I won't make another objection. Tell me anything you wish." "Don't misunderstand me," she resumed. "When I say I spoiled my life by marriage I do not mean that I believe all marriages are failures. I believe tremendously in married happiness, but I think I must be one of the women who are temperamentally unfitted to make any man happy."

Her tone was bitter self-accusing. "You cannot make me believe that," I said stoutly. "I would rather believe that you were very unwise in your choice of husbands."

Her Work Kept Up.
She laughed ironically. "Well, we will let it go at that! At any rate there is only one word that describes my first marriage. It was hell from start to finish."

The look on her face told me she was not exaggerating. It was a look only given by intense suffering.

"I was old enough, experienced enough to have displayed some judgment, but I fell in love as romantically and wildly as the most love-lorn school-girl in the world, and married at the briefest of whirlwind courtships."

"It was not three months after my wedding day that I discovered my idol's feet of clay, and it there was a shroud of youth's illusion or my self-respect left when we came to the parting of the ways, it was not Will Morton's fault. He certainly tried his best to make a finished job of it."

"I am not going to weary you with all that I went through. Let it be enough to say that while on the one hand his escapades were almost a daily insult to me, on the other he was meanly jealous, and made my life miserable with his pettiness and suspicious prying."

"I had not given up my work when I married, for the rewards were just beginning to come in. Indeed, my husband did not wish me to, and as his law practice was very slim, I soon found myself not only bearing the support of the home, but supplying him with pocket money."

Her voice dropped, as with the weight of her memories, and trailed away into silence. I tried to think of something I could say to her, but I knew that words were useless, so I waited quietly until she spoke again.

"Of course, in keeping up my work, I naturally was thrown much with my friends of the studio days. I tried my best to include my husband in my little circle of intimates, but it was useless. He would not be decently civil to them himself, and he said flatly that he did not wish me either to invite them to our home or to see any of them, women or men, elsewhere."

"I was so much in love with him that if he had stayed at home with me myself I do not know but I would have thrown loyalty to the winds and sacrificed the friendship of years to his insatiable vanity and jealousy. But all the time he was neglecting me shamefully. He was drunk for a week when a year after our marriage baby Marion was born."

Even His Mother Changed.
"When the baby came my feeling for Will changed. He had worn me out. The love I had given him I lavished upon the child. Will's mother came to live with us—she had been drifting around miserably before, and while she failed me at the time of the divorce, yet she was a tower of strength to me during the baby's infancy. I was very fond of her, and I think she sincerely liked me. But Will, her only son, could always make her believe black was white, as I later found out to my sorrow."

"With the vanishing of the hectic love"

Better Menu Contest

WHAT can I fix for dinner? That question causes many a frown in Oklahoma City homes. Variety gives zest to meals as well as to life. The same rule that applies to dinner goes for breakfast and the noonday luncheon as well. The Times is going to help the women of Oklahoma City to surprise the members of their families with a pleasing variety of menus. The women of the city are going to do most of the work and the Times is going to pay each woman for her assistance.

We want every woman to submit the best menu she can prepare for a day—breakfast, luncheon and the evening meal, whether you call it dinner or supper.

The Times will publish one menu each day and for every menu that our cook critic selects for publication, we will pay 50 cents. Be explicit in giving amount of ingredients in stating method of preparation of special dishes.

Here is a list of the prizes offered:

- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF TWO PERSONS.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF THREE.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF FOUR.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF FIVE.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF SIX.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF SEVEN.
- FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE BEST MENU FOR A FAMILY OF EIGHT.

Nourishment, palatableness, variety and economy will be considered in awarding the prizes.

The contest will continue until January 1, 1917.

Address all menus to the EDITOR, BETTER MENU CONTEST, OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES.

I had felt for Will, things went more smoothly with me. I worked like a slave to keep up the expenses of the home and to lay by something for the baby's future. My husband was away so much that the boys and girls gradually came back to something like their old term of intimacy. I never gave the matter of propriety a thought. My mother-in-law, a baby and a maid were certainly chaperons enough.

"Afterward I found out that my husband, equipped with his legal knowledge, had set all manner of traps for me, had bribed my maid, and diabolically managed to twist the most innocent visits of the boys of the old crowd to our home to his own vile meanings."

"Then came the crash. Dicky came in one Sunday afternoon and I saw at once that he was really ill. You know his carelessness. He had let a cold go until he was near pneumonia as he could well be. A sheet storm was raging outside and when Dicky, after shivering before the fire, started to go back to his studio, Will's mother, who liked Dicky immensely, joined with me in insisting that he must not go out at all, but to bed. Dicky was really too ill to care what we did with him, so we put him into bed, and I took care of him for two or three days until he was well enough to leave."

"Of course, the greater part of his care fell on me, for Will's mother was old and not strong. I am not going to tell you the accusations which my unspeakable husband made against me or the affidavits which the maid was bribed to sign about Dicky and me. You can guess. Worst of all Will's mother turned against me, not because of anything she observed but simply because her son told her I was guilty."

"I never would have thought it of you, Lillian," she said to me with tears streaming down her wrinkled old face. "I never saw anything out of the way but of course, Will wouldn't lie. And I loved you so."

"Poor, old woman. Those last few words of affection made it easier for me to give the baby up to her when the time came. She idolizes Marion. She gives her the best of care, and she does not think she will teach her to hate me as Will would."
